Acknowledgments

We are extremely grateful to the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation for recognizing the value of the Brooklyn Museum's Archives and its importance to the scholarly community. In particular, we wish to thank Angelica Rudenstine for helping us develop a plan to make these archival collections available for research. The Mellon-funded Museum Archives Initiative grant to the Brooklyn Museum has supported the staff and project activities that have culminated in the arrangement, description, and preservation of the records of the Department of the Arts of Africa, the Pacific Islands, and the Americas.

The Guide to the Records of the Department of the Arts of Africa, the Pacific Islands, and the Americas is the culmination of the efforts of many individuals within the Brooklyn Museum. Deirdre Lawrence was responsible for overseeing the implementation of the entire project; Deborah Wythe supervised the project and managed the technological aspects. The bulk of the records were processed in the early 1990s by interns Aline Brandauer and Jacqueline Maskey; Archives Assistant Peter Engelmann also processed a large portion of the collection and wrote the initial draft of the collection guide. In 2003, Mellon Project Archivist Laura Peimer processed approximately ten linear feet of additional records and revised and expanded the guide. Andrew W. Mellon Curator and Chair of the Arts of the Americas Nancy B. Rosoff reviewed the guide.

As a product of the Andrew W. Mellon-funded Museum Archives Initiative, this guide will be made available on-line, along with several other finding aids, to provide greater access to the collections held in the Brooklyn Museum Libraries and Archives. We hope these tools will benefit researchers for many generations to come.

Departmental history

At the beginning of the twentieth century there were few public museums in the United States that collected and displayed objects from Africa, the Pacific Islands, or the Americas, so it was an important occasion in 1903 when the Board of Trustees of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences¹ created the Department of Ethnology, the forerunner of the Department of the Arts of Africa, the Pacific Islands, and the Americas (AAPA).² The Brooklyn Museum acquired its early collections primarily through museum expeditions conducted by Stewart Culin, who was appointed the first curator of ethnology in 1903 and served in that capacity until his death in 1929.³ Culin assiduously and perceptively collected art and artifacts for the Ethnology Department from the Southwest, Alaska, Northwest Coast, and California regions of North America, as well as Western Europe. During his tenure he also acquired objects from other geographic areas including Asia, Eastern Europe, and Africa.

After Culin's death in April 1929, Tassilo Adam⁴ briefly took over the post of curator of ethnology. In September of that year, Herbert J. Spinden was appointed curator and, concurrently, head of the Education Department. Spinden aggressively promoted the role of the Museum in the field of education and successfully extended the department's activities into the New York public school system through lectures and loan exhibitions. As head of the Education Department, Spinden created and supervised the Museum's School Service Project. This service provided education packets and presentations for school children on various topics, including anthropological units on the culture and day-to-day life of indigenous peoples in countries and regions such as Mexico, Peru, and the Amazon.

Spinden's major collecting interest was in pre-Columbian art and in building collections from Mesoamerican and South American cultures. In the 1930s he traveled to Mexico, Nicaragua, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Chile and Argentina, quickly expanding the Museum's collection of objects, from this region, including noteworthy pre-Columbian Andean art and textiles.⁵ Spinden continued to enrich the Museum's North American holdings by arranging to borrow and later acquire in 1950 the New-York Historical Society's Nathan Sturgis Jarvis Collection of Native American Art from the Eastern Plains. The department also purchased important Peruvian textiles from the Paracas Necropolis in the 1930s, including the Paracas textile [38.121].

In the mid-1930s, Spinden directed a massive recataloging project and reinstallation program. Under his guidance the department reorganized the Ethnological Hall (1934–

The institute was dissolved between 1970 and 1980, leaving the various divisions independent.

² In 2001, AAPA was divided into the Department of the Arts of the Americas and the Department of the Arts of Africa and the Pacific Islands.

1935) to include a greater representation of ancient American art and the architecture of the Maya. The aim of the reinstallation was to achieve rational order of the collection, placing objects into large groupings to emphasize scientific and educational aspects of the artwork. As Spinden outlined: "the problem was to find installation methods which would pick out the artistic merits of individual specimens and broad effects in fresh color which would pull the entire exhibit into an esthetic unity."⁶

There were many innovative exhibitions in the department during Spinden's tenure. In 1940, the department organized Art Finds a Way, an exhibition that documented the methods and skills by which the artistic impulse has found expression throughout history. In 1941 Spinden also organized a traveling exhibition of colonial and folk art of Latin America, America South of U.S. As one of the first major exhibitions of Latin American colonial art in this country, this exhibition attracted significant attention. In the 1940s and 1950s, the Brooklyn Museum acquired some of the works that were originally loaned to the exhibition. The department also expanded its scope in 1948 by contributing to Westward Ho!, which documented early American pioneers.

In the late 1940's, Spinden and Assistant Curator Nathalie Zimmern continued to concentrate on researching, collecting, and exhibiting Latin American and pre-Columbian art. The Museum exchanged numerous objects with the National Museum of Mexico. Many distinguished Latin American objects—in addition to African and Native American works—were lent or donated to the department, particularly by Mr. and Mrs. Alastair Bradley Martin. Spinden also obtained a Carnegie Corporation grant to strengthen the Library's resources on Latin American art and he established program with Latin American institutions to exchange publications as well as objects.

Herbert Spinden resigned from the museum at the end of 1950. Although the pace of acquisitions never returned to the spectacularly rapid rate seen during Culin's and Spinden's years, the aesthetic level remained constant, and in some instances—with the African collection for example—reached new heights.

Frederick R. Pleasants was named Spinden's successor. As assistant curator, Pleasants had reorganized the African Gallery and began a reinstallation of pre-Columbian objects. As curator, he reemphasized the Native American collections and organized several important exhibitions, including Art of the Northwest Coast (1950) and American Indian Rock Drawings (1952). Pleasants traveled to Europe in 1953, and acquired significant objects from West Africa and the New Hebrides Islands. In 1954, the department organized Masterpieces of African Art, which drew from collections around the world. However, the work of the department was often stalled due to Pleasants's frequent illnesses. Poor health forced him to resign in 1956.

With Flora Siegel Kaplan serving as acting curator from 1956 to 1957, the department devoted considerable time to the reorganization of its records and storage space. In addition, a new gallery of Oceanic art was opened to the public in 1957. At this time, an inventory and recataloging of the more than 600 pre-Columbian gold and jade objects from Central America was completed and a file of photographs of objects was arranged geographically.

Upon Kaplan's resignation in 1958, Assistant Curator Jane Powell Rosenthal was placed in charge of the department. She supervised the rebuilding of the African installation—a project of the Museum Fellowship Training Program—and part of the North American Indian Gallery, including the Californian, Southwestern, and pre-Columbian displays. In 1959, 380 objects were installed for the exhibit Ancient Art of the Americas and an exchange with the Museum of the American Indian-Heye Foundation brought an impressive collection of pre-Columbian art of the Eastern United States to Brooklyn.

In 1960, the department purchased the African "Ndop portrait of King Mishe miShyaang maMbul," along with sculpture from the Sepik River area in New Guinea and 33 objects of Dutch New Guinea art. A few years later it obtained the Mujica collection of ancient Peruvian gold and staged the exhibition Gold of the Andes (1963).

In the early 1960s, a changing aesthetic in the museum world encouraged curators to develop a new approach to exhibiting objects. Curators began to recognize the value of displaying works so that visitors could perceive the artwork "in the context of history and social custom which defined its usage, the magic and ceremonial which surrounded it, and the myth which gave it meaning."⁷ They redesigned exhibitions with better identification and description of the objects, while incorporating appropriate historical and cultural frameworks. At the same time, department curators became concerned over the lack of display space and inadequate means of restoration for many of the objects. Inspired by these considerations, Rosenthal developed a three-part plan, calling for the establishment of an object conservation laboratory dedicated to the conservation of ethnographic collections, reinstallation of the department's galleries, and publication of the collections. The Avalon Foundation provided funds to set up the object conservation lab and the New York Foundation awarded a generous grant for the construction of the Art of the Americas Gallery. Designed to display the greater part of the North and South American collections, the new gallery effectively filled the display space, offering visitors a comprehensive picture of New World Indian art.

The new Hall of the Americas was nearly completed when Jane Powell Rosenthal left on extended leave in 1965. When the Hall opened on May 1 of that year, the curators had designed a display that they hoped was more culturally-sensitive and inclusive: "The cultures represented are ways of life in the same human scale as our own; one of the purposes of this installation of over two thousand objects is to involve the visitor as if no barrier of time, place or glass existed."⁸ In addition, the first in a series of scholarly works on significant aspects of the collection was published; The Jarvis Collection of Eastern Plains Indian Art (Brooklyn, New York: Brooklyn Museum, 1964) was written by Norman Feder, a curator at the Denver Art Museum.

⁸ "New Installations of Permanent Collections: The Halls of the Americas" in The Brooklyn Museum Annual Vol. VI, 1964–1965 (Brooklyn, NY: The Museum, 1966), 35.

After Rosenthal left, the new acting curator, Elizabeth Easby, organized Ancient Art of Latin America from the Collection of Jay C. Leff (1966). This expansive show included a large, scholarly catalog and occupied two galleries. Leff also provided funding to enable the Museum to install cases similar to those in the Hall of the Americas for the Oceanic collection.

During Michael Kan's tenure as curator in the department (1968–1976), the African and Oceanic galleries were refurbished and the popular African Sculpture exhibit came to Brooklyn. Assembled by the British Museum, this exhibition of two hundred objects from sixty-three collections emphasized both education and the drama of African art. Maps and labels were abundant and an audiotour and slide presentation provided background orientation.

In the early 1970's, Kan oversaw the renovation of the Hall of the Americas and the department lent over ninety of its Native American objects to shows at institutions including the Whitney Museum, the Emily Lowe Gallery, and the Hudson River Museum.

Although a period of financial adversity cut short many activities in the mid–1970s, the department continued to maintain an exhibition schedule. In addition to contributing to the Museum's successful Folk Sculpture USA exhibit in 1975, assistant curator Sylvia Williams organized Black/South Africa/Contemporary Graphics and Tapestries, a joint exhibition with the Brooklyn Public Library, in 1976. It was the first major exhibition in this country to show works of black South African artists.

In the early 1980s two important exhibitions were realized: African Furniture and Household Objects, designed by Roy Sieber, highlighted the ingenuity and skill of sub-Saharan artisans in their creation of objects for daily life; and Art of the Archaic Indonesians. Both were the first exhibitions on these topics to be shown in a major American museum. Also at this time, the African collection was strengthened by two important purchases: a Cameron, Bamileke beaded elephant mask and a raffia cloth appliquéd skirt from Zaire. The first major piece of Indonesian sculpture since 1963 was also purchased. In September 1981, the department reinstalled two more sections of the permanent Andean collection in the Hall of the Americas.

During the 1980s, under the guidance of Curator Diana Fane, the department reviewed and reevaluated its collections, initiating several inventory and survey projects. The curators inventoried and cataloged the Stewart Culin collection of North American Indian Art in preparation for an exhibition, Objects of Myth and Memory: American Indian Art at The Brooklyn Museum (1991). Departmental staff reviewed the early collection of Plains materials to ready it for reinstallation in the Hall of the Americas, and surveyed the African and Oceanic collections in the late 1980s. Andean textiles were also inventoried, rehoused, and reinstalled, making the collection accessible to researchers for the first time.

Substantial gifts added significantly to the department's Andean and African holdings, among them over two hundred textiles, ceramics, goldwork, and woodwork from Peru collected and donated by Ernest Erickson, and a group of Kuba textiles donated by the Roebbling Society, a Museum members' group. In the late 1980s the Oceanic collections increased dramatically due to two major donations, which included a large number of important objects from Papua New Guinea; Vanuatu; and New Caledonia.

Starting in the late 1980s the African Gallery underwent three renovations, each designed to improve the space and make the gallery more inviting and educational to visitors. The latest and most visible change occurred in 2001. During the African Gallery opening event on May 15, guests experienced a transformed space with bright, colorful walls and works situated next to photographs and videos showing the objects being used in their ceremonial or daily contexts.

In the 1990s the department organized two landmark, traveling exhibitions. Objects of Myth and Memory displayed more than three hundred Native American objects acquired by Stewart Culin during his expeditions. In 1996 the department participated in an inter-departmental exhibition of expansive scope: Converging Cultures: Art and Identity in Spanish America (1996) involved curators from Painting and Sculpture and Decorative Arts as well as AAPA. The artworks, acquired by Spinden throughout the 1940s, had been dispersed among several curatorial departments. A cataloging and research project that began in the late 1960s on American Colonial art in the Museum collection was one motivation for the exhibition. The catalog to the exhibition serves as a comprehensive guide to Latin American colonial arts at the Museum.

Curator biographies

Stewart Culin (1858–1929):

See: Lawrence, Deirdre E., Deborah Wythe. Guide to the Culin Archival Collection (Brooklyn, NY: The Brooklyn Museum, 1996).

Herbert J. Spinden (1879–1967):

Herbert Joseph Spinden was born to Eugene Spinden, a newspaperman, and Mary Rose Herbert Spinden, in Huron, South Dakota, on August 16, 1879. Having graduated from high school in Tacoma, Washington, he went on to earn his B.A. (1906), M.A. (1908), and Ph.D. (1909) from Harvard University.

From 1909 to 1921, Spinden served as assistant curator of anthropology at the American Museum of Natural History, New York. From 1921 to 1929, he was the curator of Mexican archaeology and ethnology at the Peabody Museum at Harvard and also curator of anthropology at the Buffalo Museum of Science during four of those years, 1926 to 1929.

In 1929, the Brooklyn Museum hired Spinden as curator of ethnology and head of the Education Division. The latter position was relinquished to John I.H. Baur in 1935. Spinden headed the Department of Primitive Art until 1950, when he became curator emeritus. He died on October 23, 1967.

Spinden's ground breaking research was well documented in more than fifty publications ranging from his scholarly work on Maya art to decipherment of the Maya calendar and essays and translation of Tewa poetry, a Native American language. His major publications include: A Study of Maya Art (1913), Ancient Civilizations of Mexico and Central America (1917), and The Secret of the Supplemental Series (1947).

Nathalie Herman Zimmern (1908–1985):

Nathalie H. Zimmern was born in 1908. She earned a B.A. from Syracuse University and took graduate courses in primitive art and oriental art at New York University and Columbia University. She joined the department in 1929 as a stenographer, serving the Oriental art department in that capacity as well. She was promoted to assistant curator of primitive art in 1939 and continued her work in Oriental art as an assistant. Her principle interest was in Latin American art, particularly textiles. She wrote several publications on Peruvian costume and organized a major exhibition on masks. Mrs. Zimmern left the Museum in 1949 to start a business in Southampton, New York, with her husband Frederick Zimmern. She died in 1985.

Frederick R. Pleasants (1906–1978):

Frederick R. Pleasants was born November 30, 1906. He studied at Princeton University, the Sorbonne, and Harvard University before becoming assistant director in charge of exhibitions at the Peabody Museum at Harvard. He was named assistant curator of the Department of Primitive Art at the Brooklyn Museum in 1949 and curator in 1950. He resigned for health reasons in 1956. Pleasant's scholarly interests included Native American arts and the nature and function of anthropological museums.

Flora Siegel Kaplan (born 1930):

Flora Kaplan was born on August 28, 1930. She came to the Brooklyn Museum as an assistant in 1951 and upon Frederick Pleasant's resignation in 1956 she was promoted to acting curator. She left the Museum to complete her doctoral thesis in 1957. She founded the Museum Studies Program at New York University in 1978 and was director for twenty-one years. She is currently a faculty member in the NYU program.

Jane Powell Rosenthal (1930–1993):

Jane P. Rosenthal was born on August 2, 1930. After graduating from Skidmore College and studying art history at the Louvre in Paris, she arrived at the Museum as a recipient of a training program fellowship in 1956. In 1960 she was awarded a Ford Foundation Fellowship for studies in the creative arts, a grant which made it possible for her to organize an archaeological exploration of southern Mexico's Guerro mountain region. Her explorations and discoveries in southern Mexico led to the highly praised exhibition Ancient Art of the Americas in 1959. Named curator in 1962, she specialized in pre-Columbian art. She went on leave in 1965 and resigned in 1967. In 1968, she remarried and changed her name to Jane Powell Dwyer. She died in 1993.

Elizabeth K. Easby (1925–1992):

Elizabeth Easby was born on March 20, 1925. Trained as an archaeologist and art historian, Easby worked as a research assistant at the Museum of the American Indian before becoming acting curator of the Primitive Art department in 1965. She left her position in 1968 to work on the Metropolitan Museum of Art's centennial exhibition of 1969. Easby died in October 1992 in Philadelphia.

Michael Kan (born 1933):

Michael Kan was born on July 17, 1933. He received bachelor's and master's degrees in art history from Columbia University. Before coming to the Brooklyn Museum in 1968 he was a lecturer in the Department of Environmental Design at the University of California, Berkeley. He also lectured in art history at Finch College and Brooklyn College and in 1974 was a visiting curator at the Museum of Fine Arts, Dallas. He left Brooklyn in 1976 to become director and curator of the Department of African, Oceanic and New World Cultures at the Detroit Institute of Arts. He retired in 2003.

Sylvia Williams (1936–1996):

Sylvia Williams was born on February 10, 1936. She studied art history at Oberlin College and New York University's Institute of Fine Arts. A specialist in African art, she worked in the African-American Institute in Lagos, Nigeria, early on in her career. Before coming to the Department of Primitive Art as a Mellon research fellow in 1971, she was an account executive in a public relations firm and was assigned to the National Council of Negro Women, Inc., as director of development. In 1983 she left Brooklyn to become director of the National Museum of African Art, Smithsonian Institution. Williams died in February 1996.

Diana Fane (born 1940):

Diana Fane was born on November 28, 1940. She received a doctorate in art history from Columbia University, specializing in Native American and pre-Columbian art. Her museum career began at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, where she worked from 1976 to 1979. During her years at the Brooklyn Museum she was an adjunct professor at Columbia University and taught museum studies classes at City College, Rutgers University, New York University, and Barnard College. In 1993–4 she participated in the Getty Scholar Program sponsored by the Getty Center for the History of Art and the Humanities in California. She retired from the Museum in November 2000.

Victoria Ebin (born 1950):

Victoria Ebin was born on August 12, 1950. She became a specialist in African culture, studying healers in Southwest Ghana in the 1970s. In 1987, she received a doctorate in social anthropology from the University of Cambridge, UK. Before coming to the Brooklyn Museum in 1984, she was the special exhibition curator at the University Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology in Cambridge. She left the Museum in 1986.

William C. Siegmann (born 1943):

Bill Siegmann attended the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, and Indiana University, Bloomington. Before coming to the Brooklyn Museum in 1987 he was the director and curator of the National Museum of Liberia in Monrovia. In addition to his museum work, he has taught at Pratt Institute and Bard Graduate Center for the Study of Decorative Arts. He has received several awards and fellowships, including a Fulbright Fellowship at the National Museum of Liberia (1984–87) and an Academic Specialist Grant from the United States Information Agency (1992).

Vicki Rovine (born 1964):

Vicki Rovine was born December 17, 1964. She received her doctorate in the art history graduate program at Indiana University. She interned briefly at the United States Embassy in Bamako, Mali, in 1991 after having been an exhibition developer at the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago. Rovine was instrumental in implementing changes in the African Gallery in 1995. She left the Museum that same year. She is currently the curator of African art at the University of Iowa Museum of Art.

Susan Kennedy Zeller (born 1945):

Susan Zeller was born on May 6, 1945. She received a doctorate from Columbia University. Prior to her position at the Brooklyn Museum, Zeller worked at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. A specialist in Native American arts, Zeller serves as curatorial representative on the NAGPRA (Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act) committee. At the Museum she has collaborated with the National Museum of the American Indian on an artists-in-residence program and organized and evaluated research materials on the Jarvis collection of Eastern Plains art.

Nancy B. Rosoff (born 1960):

Nancy B. Rosoff was born on November 15, 1960. She received a master's degree in anthropology at the University of California, Los Angeles, and has published and lectured on native peoples in the Americas. She arrived at the Brooklyn Museum from the New-York Historical Society where she served as Assistant Director for Museum Operations and Collections Manager from 1999 to 2001. Prior to that she served as an associate curator at the Heye Foundation's Museum of the American Indian, Smithsonian Institution, specializing in pre-Columbian and ethnographic art from Mexico and Central and South America.

Administrative note

Accessions:

The records of the Department of the Arts of Africa, the Pacific Islands, and the Americas were transferred to the Archives through various accessions: December 11, 1986 (1900–1975); March 25, 1987 (1938–65); June 1, 1988 (1958–79); May 25, 1989 (1933); July 20, 1989 (exhibitions); October 15, 1994 (objects); September 19, 2001 (exhibitions); September 24, 2001 (exhibitions); January 18, 2002 (exhibitions, dep't. admin.). Also of interest is a transfer from the Registrar's Office on October 25, 1988 of negatives for ethnographic materials (n.d.).

Organizational Scheme:

The records have been organized into five series. The final arrangement follows closely the original order of the records, and original file numbers have been retained to facilitate access via an early card index system. Within each series folders have been arranged by folder title and start date, with the exception of the exhibition series which has been arranged by exhibition date. Series descriptions and folder listings follow this introduction.

Series	Dates	Extent
Objects	1929–2001	8.3 l.f.
Exhibitions	1939–1996	7.8 l.f.
Departmental administration	1929–2000	7.75 l.f.
Research and writings	1929–1997	3.5 l.f.
Extra-museum activities	1926–1999	2.125 l.f.

Access tools:

In addition to this finding aid, a database table has been developed to provide more detailed access to the collection through folder-level description. The folder description database provides free-text search capability to brief synopses of folder contents for all materials in the collection. It should be noted that, although the folder descriptions are extensive, they are by no means exhaustive. A printout of the folder descriptions is included in the finding aid.

Card index: index to correspondents, circa 1950–1961.

Processing Notes:

These records have been arranged, described, and placed in acid-free storage. All staples, clips, rubberbands, and binders have been removed; deteriorated materials and thermofaxes have been removed and replaced with photocopies; photographs, library materials, and oversize materials have been transferred to appropriate storage, as noted in the files.

The Records of the Department of the Arts of Africa, the Pacific Islands, and the Americas document the administrative and curatorial activities of the department beginning at the end of the tenure of Stewart Culin, the first curator of Ethnology, from 1926 through 2001. The records document the work of the various curators, the expansion of the department, and the development of its collections throughout the twentieth century. These records relate day-to-day administrative responsibilities in addition to the scholarly activities of the curators, such as publishing, lecturing, and teaching classes.

The collection consists primarily of correspondence, along with memos, reports, notes, typescripts, lecture texts, clippings, and photographs. Included are letters to and from donors, trustees, Museum staff, collectors, dealers, scholars, and the general public. Letters and memos offer a range of topics, such as the coordination of exhibitions and installations; processing of loans, gifts, and purchases of objects; object research; fund-raising; and issues relating to personnel and departmental management.

Series descriptions

Series: Objects
Inclusive dates: 1929–2001
Extent: 8.3 l.f. (21 DB; oversized)
Organization: alphabetical

The Objects series contains documentation on the loan, sale, purchase, and exchange of objects; accession records (1959–62); gifts to the department; object inventories; a list of missing objects; and a file on one specific piece: a Pancho Fiero watercolor.

Correspondence files regarding inquiries about objects; objects offered for sale or purchased; and letters from dealers and collectors, contain considerable information regarding activities in the field and scholarly research, along with information regarding specific objects. (See also General Correspondence files in the Departmental Administration series.) This portion of the series documents the work and relationships of a circle of collectors, curators, anthropologists, and archaeologists who have identified, appraised, and researched the provenance of objects. These files also provide important insight and information on Spinden's collecting practices and his many research interests. The inquiries files are a particularly rich resource for information on the collections and the educational role of the department. Of special interest are files responding to Maya inquiries, which record Spinden's considerable knowledge of Mayan culture and history and demonstrate his preoccupation with Mayan chronologies.

A file on the Jarvis Collection—sold to the Museum by the New York Historical Society in 1950—contains correspondence regarding the sale of the collection, biographical information on Nathan Jarvis, and inventories of the objects.

Loan files contain correspondence, loan records (including object lists and condition reports), and, if applicable, records of returned loans. The records of several large loans to institutions have been separated from the general loan files due to their bulk and are labeled according to institution.

Series: Exhibitions
Inclusive dates: 1939–1996
Extent: 7.8 l.f. (18 DB; 1 SB; oversized)
Organization: chronological

The bulk of the files in the Exhibition series are comprised of correspondence related to the planning and logistics of exhibitions organized by the department. In addition to correspondence, the series contains loan records, condition reports, budget information and publicity materials, including press releases and newsclippings.

Of particular importance is the exhibition America South of U.S., organized by Spinden in 1941 and sponsored by the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. This exhibition, along with three other travelling exhibitions of pre-Columbian art, was designed to tour schools and public institutions throughout the United States, promoting knowledge about Latin America in keeping with the "Good Neighbor" policy. The exhibitions toured until 1951.

Exhibitions from the 1960s and 1970s are well documented and include several notable shows: Ancient Art of Latin America From the Collection of Jay C. Leff (1966–1967), African Sculpture (1970), and African Art of the Dogon: The Lester Wunderman Collection (1973).

This series also contains files on two significant exhibitions of the 1990s. Objects of Myth and Memory: American Indian Art at The Brooklyn Museum (1991) and Converging Cultures: Art & Identity in Spanish America (1996). Both of these shows developed out of grants to inventory and catalog the collections.

Series: Departmental administration

Inclusive dates: 1929–2000

Extent: 7.75 l.f. (18 DB; oversize)

Organizations: alphabetical

Departmental administration records document administrative functions of the department, including collections management, fundraising, and special projects. Of interest are department meeting notes and a five-year plan written in 1973. This series also includes bequest files and other object-related files that contain more general, administrative information about object transactions.

General correspondence files document the professional interactions between curators and donors, trustees, contributors, researchers, and colleagues. These files contain requests for Museum publications and photographs, and correspondence about objects, conservation techniques, and grant funding. Some correspondence was moved to the Objects series as appropriate.

The "Director" files are a useful resource in this series, providing information on personnel changes and important department activities. Departmental reports and "Affairs and Plans" files supplement the "Director" files with information on accessions, exhibitions and significant work of the department.

Series: Research and writings

Inclusive Dates: 1929–2000

Extent: 3.5 l.f. (8 DB; oversize)

Organization: alphabetical

The Research and writings series contains professional records, research, and publications of the department staff, including articles, lectures, research notes, drafts, bibliographies, correspondence regarding scholarship and publications, invitations, and appointments. The bulk of this series consists of the work of Herbert J. Spinden. Texts of Spinden's articles are supplemented by correspondence. Some of the articles include "Survey of the Mask Panel in Maya Architecture," "Indian Manuscripts of Southern Mexico," "Understanding Our Latin Neighbors," and "The American Indians: A National Obligation."

There are three sets of Spinden's lecture files. The first contains correspondence regarding lecture invitations from the U.S. and abroad. The second consists of lecture texts from the years 1929 to 1949, including "The Royal Tombs of Southern Mexico," "The Final Word On the Maya Correlation," and "Indian Artists of the Southwest." In addition, these files contain lecture notes for radio broadcasts and public events, and course materials for the Brooklyn Museum and New York University. A third set of lecture files includes lists of lantern slides that accompany lectures, and correspondence regarding the slides.

Spinden's drafts and notes files contain working drafts of publications from 1929 to 1950, including "The Secret of the Supplementary Series," "The Bat Motif," "Tobacco is American," and the "Westward Ho!" handbook.

In addition to lectures and articles files, this series includes Spinden's correspondence with Alfonso Caso, Thor Heyerdahl, Juana Vogt and the Peabody Museum, as well as correspondence with Alfred Tozzer regarding models of Mayan temples made by the Works Progress Administration. Spinden's Research and Writings files also include appointments, bibliographies, income tax returns, Woodstock property documents, and a field report from Campeche. (See also Extra–museum activities series for additional articles and papers by Spinden).

Research and writings of other department members are represented in this series as well: assistant curator Nathalie Zimmern's research on colonial tapestries, Frederick R. Pleasant's articles and lectures, and assistant Marian Estabrook's research on Goanese textiles, and correspondence regarding the publications of Jane P. Rosenthal and Diana Fane.

Series:	Extra–museum activities
Inclusive Dates:	1926–2000
Extent:	2.125 l.f. (4 DB, 1/2 DB; oversize)
Organization:	alphabetical

The extra–museum activities series contains records relating to curators' involvement with outside organizations, primarily correspondence regarding activities and membership. Of particular interest are the records of Spinden's participation in outside organizations. Included are records regarding Spinden's membership in the Century Association, the Eighth American Scientific Congress of 1940, the Explorer's Club, the New York Academy of Science, and the School Art League. One file, "Congresses and Conventions," contains material relating to other members of the department.

The "Eastern Association of Indian Affairs" file contains correspondence with the National Park Service regarding the destruction of Pueblo villages and legislation related to Native American affairs. Also of significance is a file on the American Anthropological Association that includes correspondence with the State Department and the White House regarding the post–war removal of art from Germany. Extra–museum activities also contains several drafts of Spinden papers and articles, including "Organization of the Hall of Early Man," "Time Scale for a New World," "Four-Dimensional Exploration," and several articles on American Indian culture and art. A file on the Science Service contains news releases on Spinden's archaeological and research discoveries.
